NOTICE OF MOTION AND MOTION TO CONSOLIDATE, SUPPORTING MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES
(Fed. R. Civ. P. 42)

Hearing Date: December 9, 2010
Time: 1:30 p.m.
Place: Judge Richard Seeborg
United States District Court
450 Golden Gate Avenue, Court
Room 3, 17th Floor
San Francisco, California

Trial Date: None set

NOTICE OF MOTION AND MOTION

2 TO ALL PARTIES AND THEIR ATTORNEYS OF RECORD IN THE ABOVE-
3 CAPTIONED CASE AND IN PIZZO V. NEWSOM, N.D. CAL. CASE NO. 09-4493 CW:

4 Please take notice that at 1:30 p.m. on Thursday December 9, 2010, or as soon thereafter as the 5 matter can be heard, in Courtroom No. 3 of the United States Courthouse located at 450 Golden Gate 6 Avenue, 17th Floor, San Francisco, California, all San Francisco Defendants in this case and Pizzo v.
7 Newsom, N.D. Cal. Case No. 09-4493 CW (collectively, "City"), will move for consolidation of both 8 cases before this Court on the grounds that consolidation will eliminate the risk of inconsistent 9 adjudications of important constitutional questions of first impression and significantly increase 10 judicial efficiency.

11 This motion for consolidation is based on this Notice of Motion and Motion; the supporting 12 Memorandum of Points and Authorities, and Declaration of Sherri Sokeland Kaiser, both filed 13 concurrently with this Notice; the pleadings, records, and papers filed herein; and any other such 14 evidence or argument as may be presented or heard by the Court on or before the motion hearing.

QUESTION PRESENTED

16 Should the Court grant consolidation of two actions pending in the Northern District of 17 California where (a) both cases raise identical legal challenges to three San Francisco Police Code 18 sections related to guns under the Second and Fifth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution, the 19 California Constitution, and state statutes; (b) the Northern District would be spared substantial time 20 and effort in resolving duplicative claims; (c) there are no relevant factual differences between the two 21 sets of facial challenges; (d) the Second Amendment claims raise complex and unsettled questions of 22 law; (e) there is a substantial risk of inconsistent adjudications in the absence of consolidation; (f) both 23 cases are in an identical procedural posture and neither is ready for trial; (g) consolidation will not 24 cause undue delay; and (h) bifurcation is available for the unrelated claims in one of the complaints?

INTRODUCTION

2 This Court should consolidate the two separate cases currently pending before different judges
3 in the Northern District that seek to invalidate the same three San Francisco gun control ordinances
4 under the Second Amendment. A Second Amendment jurisprudence of individual rights emerged 5 only two years ago and remains in its earliest infancy, where even the standard for decision remains 6 unknown. Given this great uncertainty, the risk of inconsistent adjudication of Second Amendment
7 claims is high – and so are the stakes. It is no mere lawyerly hyperbole to say that the challenged
8 ordinances in this case potentially go to matters of life and death: whether the City must permit gun 9 owners to leave loaded handguns lying accessible and outside their personal control in their homes; 10 whether the City must permit the sale of ammunition designed to be unusually injurious to human 11 flesh by, for example, exploding on impact and propelling barbed shrapnel into surrounding tissue; 12 and whether the City must permit shootings. The Court should resolve these important questions in a 13 consistent manner so that the City does not find itself in the untenable position of having its public 14 safety laws judicially sanctioned in one court but enjoined in another, forcing the City to break the law 15 by following it. The Court should ensure it speaks with one voice by consolidating these near-16 identical Second Amendment challenges.

17 Consolidation will also save significant judicial resources by resolving a legally complex set of 18 claims but once in one Judge's chambers, not twice in two. The City, another government entity, will 19 also conserve its limited resources, but none of the other parties suffers a duplication of effort as a 20 result. And this can happen without undue expense, inconvenience or delay to any party. While the 21 Pizzo case also contains other, distinct claims that go to the separate issue of concealed weapon 22 permits, to the extent that these claims might retard the resolution of the common challenges to San 23 Francisco's ordinances, Rule 42 permits the Court simply to bifurcate them. Under these 24 circumstances, consolidation is an eminently practical case management approach that reduces a 25 significant risk of inconsistent decisions on important issues of civil rights and public safety, increases 26 efficiency, conserves resources, and does so at little to no expense. The City respectfully requests that 27 the Court order it forthwith.
28

BACKGROUND

2 On May 15, 2009, the National Rifle Association ("NRA"), the San Francisco Veteran Police 3 Officers Association, and six individual plaintiffs filed the original complaint in this action against the 4 City, the Mayor, and the Chief of Police.<sup>1</sup> Jackson Docket Entry No. 1. The complaint, and the later-
5 filed Amended Complaint (Docket Entry No. 18), attack three ordinances in the San Francisco Police 6 Code. The first is a "safe storage" law that allows gun owners to carry loaded weapons freely in their 7 homes, but requires them to store their weapons in a locked container or use a trigger lock whenever 8 the gun is not under the owner's direct, personal control. S.F. Police Code § 4512 (attached for the 9 Court's convenience of reference as Appendix A). The second, Police Code Section 613.10(g), is a 10 licensing provision that applies to San Francisco ammunition retailers and prohibits them from selling 11 types of bullets that have no sporting purpose or are designed to increase the damage to the human 12 body, such as hollow point bullets that flatten and tear a wider path through the body, exploding 13 bullets that project barbs or other shrapnel into surrounding tissues, or fragmenting bullets. See 14 Appendix B. The third challenged ordinance, Police Code Section 1290, bans firearm discharges 15 within City limits without express exceptions, although implied exceptions for law enforcement and 16 other activities are clearly observed. See Appendix C.

17 Plaintiffs allege that the safe storage law is inconsistent with their Second Amendment right to 18 keep and use handguns in the home in self-defense because it may delay, however briefly, their access 19 to a loaded weapon during a home invasion. Am. Compl. ¶¶ 47-55. Plaintiffs also contend that the 20 City's refusal to license the sale of unusually injurious ammunition likewise burdens their Second 21 Amendment right to in-home self-defense by making some ammunition that may be suitable for self-22 defense purposes more difficult to procure (id. ¶¶ 56-62) and further complain that the distinction 23 between permissible and impermissible ammunition sales is unconstitutionally vague. Id. ¶¶ 68-73.
24 Plaintiffs attack the discharge ban under the Second Amendment because it does not expressly exempt 25 shootings in self-defense in the home. Id. ¶¶ 63-67. Finally, for similar reasons, Plaintiffs also 26 challenge each of the three ordinances as violating an asserted California constitutional right to bear

27
28 <sup>1</sup> At that time, the San Francisco Chief of Police was Heather Fong. With the City's consent, Plaintiffs have since named current San Francisco Chief of Police George Gascón in her place.

1 arms, and they allege that each ordinance is preempted under various constellations of state statutory 2 and decisional law. Id. ¶¶ 74-81. In sum, they make 10 claims: four under the federal constitution and 3 six state law claims.

4 Although the case has been pending since May 2009, it has advanced little. In lieu of opposing 5 the City's motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction, on August 24, 2009, Plaintiffs filed an amended 6 complaint. See Jackson Docket Entry Nos. 9, 18. Three days later, at Plaintiffs' request and with the 7 consent of the City, the Court stayed the case. Id., Nos. 19, 22. Only very recently, on September 13, 8 2010, did this Court lift the stay. Id., No. 37. The City anticipates that it will file a motion to dismiss 9 under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12 as the next substantive step in resolving the Amended Complaint, but it has 10 not done so yet.<sup>2</sup>

11 On September 23, 2009, with the Jackson case already stayed, Plaintiff Therese Marie Pizzo 12 filed a separate action, now pending before Judge Wilken, raising the exact same claims against the 13 exact same San Francisco Police Code sections and the exact same defendants. Pizzo v. Newsom, N.D.
14 Cal. Case No. 09-4493 CW, Docket Entry No. 1, ¶¶ 99-102, 134-49, 213-51. In addition, her 15 complaint contains a second, legally and factually distinct set of allegations challenging the City's 16 discretionary denial of her application for a permit to carry a concealed weapon (a "CCW" permit) and 17 the constitutionality of the State's CCW laws. Id., ¶¶ 20-42, 117-21, 150-88, 224-51. On the basis of 18 these wholly unrelated CCW claims, Pizzo names three additional defendants: former San Francisco 19 Police Chief Heather Fong and San Francisco County Sheriff Michael Hennessey, each of whom she 20 holds responsible for denying her permit application, and California Attorney General Edmund Brown 21 because the CCW laws are promulgated by the State, not the City.<sup>3</sup>

23 <sup>2</sup> In a companion motion filed last week under Civil Local Rule 6-3, the City seeks an 24 extension of time to file its response to the Amended Complaint until 30 days after the Court decides 25 this motion to consolidate in the hope that it will be allowed to file a single responsive motion addressing both cases. After failing to stipulate to this relief voluntarily in response to the City's repeated attempts to meet and confer, Plaintiffs have now filed a Statement of Non-Opposition.

26 <sup>3</sup> Pizzo names some of the defendant officials in their individual as well as official capacities, 27 whereas the Jackson plaintiffs name Mayor Newsom and Chief Gascón in their official capacities 28 only. But given that all plaintiffs' shared claims against the City's gun control ordinances are identical facial challenges that do not touch upon the individual acts of any defendants, and given that none of the plaintiffs seeks damages in any event, this slight technical difference between the plaintiffs' approaches should not affect the decision to consolidate.

1 On November 2, 2009, the plaintiffs in Jackson filed a Notice of Related Cases in which they 2 described the newly filed Pizzo complaint and asked then-presiding Judge Hamilton to relate the two 3 cases. See Jackson Docket Entry No. 24 (“Conducting these cases before different Judges would 4 create an unduly burdensome duplication of labor and expense and a risk of conflicting results. These 5 cases should be deemed related, and possibly consolidated.” Id. at 3.) The City followed suit a few 6 days later, filing its own Motion to Relate Case. Id., No. 25. On November 20, 2009, Judge Hamilton 7 in her discretion denied these requests, concluding that despite the series of identical claims against the 8 three San Francisco Police Code sections in both cases, the presence of the additional CCW claims and 9 defendants in Pizzo counseled against relating the two cases. See Jackson Docket Entry No. 26.

10 Despite the fact that Pizzo has been on file almost as long as Jackson, that case too has 11 progressed little because it too has been stayed. Pizzo Docket Entry No. 12. Whereas in this case, 12 Plaintiffs sought and the Court granted relief from the stay, the parties in Pizzo have thus far preferred 13 to leave their stay in place in anticipation of rulings in pending Ninth Circuit cases that may decide 14 fundamental questions of governing law necessary to resolve Plaintiff’s claims.

15 ARGUMENT

16 The Court should exercise its discretion to consolidate Pizzo with Jackson to avoid inconsistent 17 rulings and a wasteful duplication of effort by the Court and counsel. To the extent the Court has any 18 concern about the effect of the unrelated CCW claims on consolidation, it should use its authority 19 under Rule 42 to bifurcate those claims for separate hearing or trial.

20 I. COMMON QUESTIONS OF LAW PREDOMINATE AND PROVIDE A STRONG 21 BASIS FOR CONSOLIDATION.

22 This Court has a fresh slate and broad discretion to determine whether and how to consolidate 23 Pizzo with Jackson. While the cases are pending before two different judges, and Judge Hamilton 24 earlier declined to relate them despite the requests by both the Jackson Plaintiffs and Defendants to do 25 so, this poses no barrier to consolidation. As the Ninth Circuit has explained, Rule 42(a) permits 26 consolidation of actions that are “pending before the court” (emphasis added), which gives the district 27 court “broad discretion . . . to consolidate cases pending in the same district.” Investors Research Co.
28

1 v. U.S. Dist. Ct. for the Southern Dist. Of Cal., 877 F.2d 777, 777 (9th Cir. 1989). It is reversible error
2 to decline to exercise that discretion simply because a related case transfer has earlier been denied. Id.

3 Rule 42 authorizes the Court to consolidate actions “involving a common question of law or 4 fact.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(a). Pizzo and Jackson amply qualify for consolidation because they share a 5 series of important, unsettled questions of law. Nor is consolidation made harder by factual 6 distinctions between the two cases: beyond the facts necessary to support each plaintiff’s purported 7 standing to challenge the City’s ordinances, there are no factual differences between the claims 8 because there are no facts—not one of the City’s three challenged Police Code sections has ever been 9 applied to any of the plaintiffs. Accordingly, the shared questions of law predominate, cf. Wright &
10 Miller, 9A Fed. Prac. & Proc. Civ. § 2383 (3d ed.) (consolidation most appropriate when common 11 issues predominate), and so will the work of resolving them.

12 The Second Amendment claims in each case, in particular, will require the Court to carefully 13 consider complex and unsettled issues of constitutional law. Indeed, given that Second Amendment 14 jurisprudence has taken such a sharp turn with the Supreme Court’s still-fresh decision in Heller v.
15 District of Columbia, 128 S.Ct. 2783 (2008) (departing from prior precedent and announcing for the 16 first time a right to bear arms that flows to individuals), Second Amendment law is now almost 17 entirely uncharted territory. There is precious little precedent to guide the Court in how to approach, 18 much less resolve, Second Amendment challenges, and so far none of it is in the Ninth Circuit.
19 Moreover, any final judgment the Court enters will be closely scrutinized. Appeal is a near-certainty, 20 and it is well within the realm of possibility that this Court’s decision will also undergo Supreme Court 21 review. Presumably, then, the Second Amendment questions will occupy the Court to a much greater 22 extent than all of the many pendant state law claims combined, each of which is grounded in a settled 23 mode of analysis.

24 Moreover, under the plain language of Rule 42(a), common questions of law or fact are the 25 only prerequisite for consolidation. Actions need not “be identical before they may be consolidated,” 26 In re Cendant Corp. Litig., 182 F.R.D. 476, 478 (D.N.J. 1998), nor is identity of the parties required.
27 Wright & Miller, 9A Fed. Prac. & Proc. (3d ed.) § 2384. Thus, the mere presence of the CCW claims 28 and their associated defendants in Pizzo does not preclude consolidation in any way, particularly since

1 all defendants in both actions are City defendants represented by the same counsel, with the sole 2 exception of the California Attorney General in Pizzo. Thus, the CCW claims can be litigated
3 alongside, and likely on the same schedule, as the consolidated claims against the Police Code 4 sections, just as they would be if consolidation were denied. Alternatively, as discussed below, the 5 Court may bifurcate the issues in Pizzo to allow all parties' challenges to the City's Police Code 6 provisions to proceed together, while not requiring the Pizzo plaintiff's CCW challenges to follow the 7 same schedule.

8 II. CONSOLIDATION WOULD ELIMINATE THE RISK OF INCONSISTENT RULINGS AND CUT THE COURT'S WORKLOAD IN HALF.

10 Consolidating the common questions in Jackson and Pizzo offers the significant benefits of 11 eliminating the risk of inconsistent decisions and dramatically reducing the district court's overall 12 workload. No matter the nature of the controversy, courts of course do what they can to avoid 13 inconsistent rulings. Here, that fundamental concern is heightened because the challenged ordinances 14 all address public safety, whether by putting loaded guns out of reach of children or reducing the 15 lethality of gunshot wounds by taking the most gravely injurious bullets off the shelves. Upholding 16 these laws in one breath and enjoining them in the next would leave San Francisco in an untenable 17 quandary as to how to obey the court's orders and risks leaving the status of the laws pending the 18 Ninth Circuit's resolution of the conflicting judgments to chance rather than principle. Decisions with 19 such potentially significant consequences to public safety should not be made that way.

20 But even setting aside the unusual gravity of the situation, consolidation should be granted for 21 the simple pragmatic reason that it will cut the court's overall workload in half. Admittedly, that 22 benefit may not flow directly to this Court and its chambers since consolidation would entail assuming 23 additional responsibilities that currently rest with Judge Wilken, but the resources conserved by the 24 Northern District as a whole will greatly outweigh the additional burden that this Court would 25 shoulder. This Court should be able to resolve the duplicative claims easily, possibly by doing little 26 more than printing up a second caption page. And to the extent that this Court may face a decision 27 about the CCW claims that it might otherwise have avoided, that would not increase the overall court's 28 workload, since those claims would have to be decided in someone's courtroom anyway.

1 III. CONSOLIDATION WILL NOT CAUSE MEANINGFUL INCONVENIENCE,
 2 EXPENSE OR DELAY.

3 While there is much to be gained by consolidating Jackson and Pizzo, comparatively little 4 counsels against it. In exercising its discretion to consolidate, the Court should balance “the saving of 5 time and effort consolidation would produce against any inconvenience, delay, or expense that it 6 would cause.” Huene v. United States, 743 F.2d 703, 704 (9th Cir.1984).

7 In the circumstances of this case, considerations of convenience and expense weigh in favor of, 8 rather than against, consolidation. All of the parties and counsel will remain in the same venue and 9 litigate the same motions as they would otherwise, while the City will be spared the inconvenience and 10 unnecessary expense of briefing and arguing the same issues twice, and possibly multiple times if the 11 cases are not fully resolved on the preliminary motions.

12 Thus, the only potential disadvantage of consolidation is the comparatively brief and self-13 imposed<sup>4</sup> delay to the Jackson Plaintiffs for the short period of time that it takes for the parties to brief 14 and the Court to consider this motion. Of course, that delay is also unavoidable. By the time this 15 Court can consider it, it will have happened, and denying consolidation will do nothing to prevent it.
 16 Moreover, there is no reason to believe that the cases will have to proceed more slowly together than 17 either would have done individually if consolidation is granted.

18 But even if consolidation with Pizzo might somewhat delay the resolution of Jackson, perhaps 19 due to the concomitant adjudication of the unrelated CCW claims in Pizzo, that still would not counsel 20 against consolidation. In a nearly identical case to this one, the District Court for the District of 21 Columbia granted consolidation of two cases challenging the same local law under the Second 22 Amendment, even though one of the cases “also take[s] issue with a host of other aspects of the 23 District’s gun laws.” Hanson v. District of Columbia, 257 F.R.D. 19, 22 (D.C.D.C. 2009). Citing 24 Mills v. Beech Aircraft Corp., 886 F.2d 758-761-62 (5th Cir. 1989), which had denied consolidation 25 where one case was ready for trial but the other was not, the court in Hanson concluded that the

26 <sup>4</sup> The Jackson Plaintiffs now claim to oppose consolidation because of the delay it requires to 27 brief, hear and decide a noticed motion. This is quite odd. Their opposition is what requires the City 28 to seek consolidation by noticed motion—it is the very genesis of the delay. The parties could have,
 and the City offered to, proceed much more swiftly by stipulation. See Declaration of Sherri Kaiser in Support of Motion to Consolidate (“Kaiser Dec.”), Exs. A-C.

1 potential delay to the narrower Second Amendment challenge was not of the magnitude that might 2 forestall consolidation given that both cases were still at the same, early procedural juncture. Hanson, 3 27 F.R.D. at 22. The court also explained that, “it is the court’s duty to consider not only the delay 4 that consolidating the cases might cause for the plaintiffs, but also the delay that not consolidating the 5 cases might cause for the defendants and for the court.” Id. (emphasis in original). For those facing 6 duplicative proceedings, consolidation saves substantial time.

7 This Court should follow the sound reasoning in Hanson. Both Jackson and Pizzo still face 8 preliminary motions to dismiss—indeed, none of the defendants has even filed an answer—so there is 9 no danger that one case will unfairly keep the other from long-awaited resolution at the eleventh hour.
10 And comparing whatever speculative delay consolidation might cause the Jackson Plaintiffs against 11 the certain and significant delay to the Court and the City in the absence of consolidation, the latter 12 well outweighs the former. Accordingly, every single relevant consideration—judicial efficiency, 13 avoiding inconsistent adjudications, convenience, expense and delay—strongly favors consolidation.

14 Finally, to the extent the Court is concerned that the CCW claims could cause unwarranted 15 delay, it can simply bifurcate them, thereby retaining all of the benefits of consolidation without any 16 potential disadvantages. Consolidation and bifurcation under Rule 42 are “designed to achieve a 17 common end. That objective is to give the district court broad discretion to decide how cases on its 18 docket are to be tried so that the business of the court may be dispatched with expedition and economy 19 while providing justice to the parties.” Wright & Miller, 9A Fed. Prac. & Proc. Civ. § 2381 (3d ed.).
20 Both procedures are available for use in the same case. See SanDisk Corp. v. STMicroelectronics, 21 Inc., 2009 WL 1404689, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Case No. C04-4379 JF(RS), May 19, 2009) (bifurcating 22 inequitable conduct defense in consolidated patent infringement actions); Monolithic Power Systems, 23 Inc. v. O2 Micro Intl. Ltd., 2006 WL 2329466, at *1 (N.D. Cal., Case Nos C04-2000 CW & C 06-2929
24 CW, Aug. 9, 2006) (granting consolidation and acknowledging power to bifurcate claims or issues 25 should a single trial prove overly complex). Should the Court conclude that bifurcating the CCW 26 claims is desirable here, the City would have no objection.

CONCLUSION

2 Because it would be inefficient, inconvenient, wasteful, slow and even risky to continue to 3 adjudicate these cases separately, the City respectfully requests the Court to consolidate them.
